

NEGRO BARES
LIFE OF CRIMECampbell, Confessed Slayer of 2 Women, Resigned to Fate.
"Don't Care Now."

trouble and so I went to Baltimore," he said. He smiled as he gave this information, the only evidence of bravado displayed in his confession. "While I was in Baltimore, I heard all about the trouble that was going on in Washington and I made up my mind that I would not come back until everything had quieted down. "Didn't you feel bad at the thought that somebody else might be arrested for what you did?" he was asked. "No, that never worried me. The only thing that worried me was the thought that I was going to be caught some day. I always felt sure that some day I was going to get caught, but I needed the money, and so I kept on."

DON'T BELIEVE IN GHOSTS.

"Are you worried now?" "No, I ain't worried. Death has no sting for me. I stole and killed because I needed money. I was always underpaid and never had a chance. It was easier to get money in this way than by working, and when I was lucky enough to escape I was encouraged to keep at it. I didn't like to kill, but I had to protect myself."

Although Campbell has admitted enough to send him to the gallows, if convicted, his manner bears out his seeming indifference. He eats and sleeps well and he said in response to questions that he knew no qualms of conscience.

"I don't believe in no ghosts. They never trouble me," he says.

While the police believe there is a possibility that he may have exaggerated some of the crimes to which he has pleaded guilty, they have already traced his confession and find there is a basis of truth in most of his admissions.

KNEW HE WOULD BE CAUGHT.

Campbell now says that he wants nobody else to suffer for the things that he has done and expresses a willingness to aid the police in clearing up the mysteries even though the revelations make his own case the darker. "I guess there is nothing for me now but to die and I am ready," he says. "I was caught and I know what I would get. That's all I care to say."

Notwithstanding that Campbell has informed the police that it was he who attacked and attempted to criminally assault Miss Mary Saunders, a war worker, near Somerset, in Maryland, in July, 1919, for which crime Forrest Egan, a young Washington negro, was convicted in the circuit court here several months ago and is now serving a twenty-year sentence in the Maryland penitentiary, the authorities doubt his guilt. Egan's guilt, it is said, was established beyond the slightest doubt and that Campbell's statement is a pure fabrication, made for a purpose, they are unable to understand.

DOUBT EAGAN'S INNOCENCE.

It is pointed out that Egan was tried before Chief Judge Hammond Turner and Associate Judges Edward C. Peter and Glenn H. Worthington and that the court by unanimous agreement promptly found the negro guilty. Both former State's Attorney Albert M. Bouie and former Sheriff William L. Auf, who took a leading part in the investigation of the case, declared today that Egan is not the slightest doubt of Egan's guilt.

State's Attorney Thomas L. Dawson, who, with former State's Attorney Bouie, conducted the prosecution of the case against Egan, would not discuss the development today further than to say that any action looking to Egan's release would have to be taken with Governor Ritchie and that if the governor should refer the case to this county for a recommendation nothing would be one until after the statement of Campbell had been very carefully investigated and its truth established beyond the slightest doubt.

Terminal Red Cross Women

Take Vacation While Rooms Are Redecorated.

For the first time since it occupied the Presidential suite at the Union station in July, 1918, the canteen corps of the District Red Cross chapter has been forced to cease its operations through a desire on the part of the station authorities to renovate the rooms. It was through the courtesy of President and Mrs. Wilson in permitting the use of the suite that hundreds of the hands of soldiers and sailors were rendered service by seventy-five women of Washington, who formed the canteen corps during the war.

WILL RESUME IN FALL.

Since the armistice the work gradually dwindled down until the canteen corps at Walter Reed Hospital and St. Elizabeth's Hospital were the only ones to benefit by its continued maintenance. These men were served hot meals after the theater or after an outing, but the need for this service has become less and less as the warm days approached with the result that it was thought an opportune time to suspend operations until the fall when the canteen would resume its valuable undertaking.

It was with great reluctance that the women of the corps, who are still active, accepted the decision of the chapter and division officials and it reflects greatly to their credit upon their intense desire to be of continued service to the veterans. In notifying the corps of the request of the Union station authorities, Mrs. Isaac W. Little, chairman of the canteen committee of the District Chapter, wrote:

WORK IS COMPLETED.

"Upon being informed by the superintendent of the Union Station that the room so long and so generously loaned us were needed for repairs, the question of closing the refreshment service for a short period was considered. After carefully looking into the matter from all viewpoints it was deemed wise by the chapter and Potomac division that we take a short vacation. Therefore the work will be discontinued until the early fall."

"I earnestly ask that every member will hold herself in readiness to answer any emergency call that might come during vacation and to time in the fall as may be desired."

"Your work has been so fine that no word of commendation from me is necessary, and I know that it has been thoroughly appreciated by the men, the chapter and the division in whose names and in my own I thank you most earnestly."

Austin E. Underwood, director of the department of military relief, Potomac division, under whose jurisdiction the canteen operates, stated that he had conferred with the officials at Walter Reed and St. Elizabeth's Hospitals and they had informed him that no hardship would be endured by the patients, who have taken advantage of the service, if the canteen was closed for the hot days.

The soldiers were landed at the army pier, where preparations were completed to forward the bodies to their last resting places in home cemeteries. As has been the custom with all returned dead soldiers, each body will be accompanied by a guard of honor.

At the pier there was no ceremony or funeral observance, this last duty of honor on the part of the nation for which they fought having been completed when the bodies were consigned to their temporary graves in foreign lands.

HOG NOW MEASURED

BY BUSHELS OF CORN

Measuring the price of hogs in bushels of corn instead of in dollars is a form of applied mathematics used by the United States Department of Agriculture in keeping tab on the prices of farm products.

Theoretically, 100 pounds of live hogs should be worth about thirteen bushels of corn. The ratio varies. It is generally highest in the corn belt and lowest in New England, the far South, and the far West.

At the present time the ratio is unusually narrow—that is, 100 pounds of hog is not worth as many bushels of corn as usual. Department experts draw the inference that during the next twelve months hogs will advance more than corn or corn will decline more than hogs.
